From the Desk of Your Pastor...

Ash Wednesday

"We commit this body to the ground; earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust."

Words about ashes and dirt are spoken not only on the first day of Lent, but at any time of year that the Christian assembly gathers, -- outdoors, -- to bury their faithful dead. The good earth holds an earthen body, and together they await the renewal of creation at the coming of Jesus...

In the Christian church year, we are entering the season of Lent. Some call it penitential, some call it somber, some call it a time of sacrifice. It can be all these things at different points, AND – in the early church, Lent was seen as a time to prepare for baptism. For those who were in preparation – these days could mean simplifying one's life, ridding it of luxuries or taking on a practice of reconciliation. For us today – whatever we do or don't do in Lent, our purpose is to ready ourselves for renewal in the waters of promise.

The cross of ashes is really a soilinfused version of the seal made with oil in the rite of baptism. Justin Ambrose (in the early church) preached to his flock, "if we could have baptized you in dirt without killing you, we would have!"

I remember one young child at the altar, who looked over at the others receiving the cross on their forehead, and he asked his mother in a voice loud enough for me to hear – "why did that cross turn black?" This is akin to the question that some children ask when they begin to realize the outcome of Jesus journey to Jerusalem. They might ask something like – "Why did Jesus get dead?"

WHY? Is a good question. Why is Ash Wednesday one of the most loved Christian liturgies? Could it be that we are drawn to its honest speech about death. Perhaps it's because it is such a welcome reprieve from our "death-denying" culture. Somewhere deep inside us, I think we know what the psalmist was saying when they wrote, "Teach us, O Lord, to number our days." In a sense, I think we need awareness of death, in order to seek joy and gladness in our living.

The twentieth century Roman Catholic priest, Romano Guardini, writes – "Everything turns to ashes, everything whatever. This house I live in, these clothes I am wearing, my household stuff, my money, my fields, meadows, woods, the dog that follows me, the clock in the hall, this hand I am writing with, these eyes that read what I write, all the rest of my body, people I have loved, people I have hated, or been afraid of, whatever was great in my eyes upon earth, whatever small and contemptible, all without exception will fall back into dust.

And when Christ returns, like the joyous sun of springtime and like new growth in the field, all that was humbled to dust shall be raised to life.”

To experience this ancient and beloved practice, come to Olsburg Lutheran Church on March 5, at 7 PM – OR – Walsburg Lutheran Church on March 5, at 8:15 PM.

Is This Worth Talking About?

One of the biggest challenges we have in our culture is how we talk about “this”. Pastors I have worked with have said that “this” is a foundational sign of our maturity as Christians and disciples of Jesus Christ. People have said that they would stop if I talked too much about “this.” So why is it that “this” causes so much angst, frustration and anxiety in our church and life as people of faith?

Let me take a moment to state four ways for us to think about “this” in the year ahead. These are ways to think and live for both us as individuals, and for us as a congregation.

ONE: To know and understand that God cares about our entire life, this includes our financial spending, goals and worries. God cares about our financial well-being. God cares about our financial worries as much as we do. God cares how we spend our money on daily needs and how we give of this money to show our love to God and others. It’s easy to forget that God loves and cares about our entire lives, including how we are doing with our finances.

TWO: Stewardship is a way of life, not just a way for the church to ask for money. I understand and am a part of a congregation that survives on weekly gifts and offerings and has a yearly budget, but somehow, when we talk about stewardship – I get the impression people tune out and think this is what we care about most... That meeting the budget at the end of the year and getting everyone to give the goal... AND, as a pastor, I do care about these things, -- I care more about people being good stewards. God cares more about our entire lives than our church budgets! Don’t you think?

THREE: Stewardship is NOT just about money but it does include money. God cares about what we do with our money, but also what we do with our time and talents! God cares about what we do at our jobs, how we give of our time to serve others, and how we take care of our families and ourselves by eating well, spending quality time together, and resting.

FOUR: It can be helpful and “re-framing” to live everyday with the question – How does what I do with my time, talent, and treasure affect my relationship with God? Stewardship is first and foremost about a relationship – our relationship with God. How does our stewardship or management of God’s stuff affect our relationship with God? Does it? Have you ever stopped to think about the question? – When we start to think about our relationship with our stuff, as our relationship with God, we start to care for things differently – we start to become good stewards of all that God has given us: time, talent, treasure...

How are you being called to live, give, and go – more faithfully in the year ahead???

ELCA World Hunger

More than 800 million people — that’s 1 in 8 people in our world today — are hungry.

As members of the ELCA, we are called to respond. We are a church that rolls up our sleeves and gets to work.

Working with and through our congregations, in the United States, Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands Lutheran churches overseas and other partners, ELCA World Hunger is uniquely positioned to reach communities in need. From health clinics to microloans, water wells to animal husbandry, community meals to advocacy, your gifts to ELCA World Hunger make it possible for the ELCA to respond, supporting sustainable solutions that get at the root causes of hunger and poverty.

Hunger facts

- 868 million people – that’s 1 in 8 – are chronically hungry and cannot lead active daily lives.
  - 1.4 billion people live in extreme poverty, living on less than $1.25 per day.
  - In the United States, more than 50 million people do not know where their next meal will come from.
- 46.2 million Americans are living in poverty.

These are some statistics from the ELCA website which can help to keep us involved in God’s Kingdom on a global level. Even more important, is the way we participate in the community in which we live to help lift up the needs in our own front yard as we commit to be an agent of change with our neighbors, both next door and around the world.
