Grace and peace to you all,

Lent comes from an Old English word for “lengthen” and refers to the gradually lengthening days of late winter and early spring. Over the centuries, Lent has evolved into a 40-day period of deep reflection and repentance that leads us towards Easter Sunday.

The number 40 holds deep significance in our faith tradition. “In the ancient scriptural imagination, “40” was both a stylized way of saying, “for a long time,” and a way of resonating with other key “40’s” in Israel’s sacred memory: the flood’s 40 days and nights of rain, Moses’ 40 days and nights on Mount Sinai, Israel’s 40 years of wilderness wandering, and not least, Jesus’ 40 days of wilderness temptation.

The underlying idea here is that God, like a master poet, choreographer, or composer, works through signature forms in time and space — and in the Season of Lent, we’re invited to participate in one of those forms by stepping into our own 40-day pilgrimage of reflection, repentance, prayer, and preparation.”

As we begin our 40 day Lenten pilgrimage we are called into the wild. However, this season is not about getting through the wilderness, but it is about embracing the call into the wild. The path into the wild is uncomfortable, it is vulnerable, and it requires us to put our whole trust and selves into God. We often avoid the uncomfortable in life. Because when we get into the desert, that dry and weary season of life, things seem pointless and lifeless. Oftentimes, when we get into the wild, deep into the desert, we are hopeless. Yet, for our faith ancestors, the desert was not always a place of hopelessness. In fact, God often used the wilderness and desert as a place of encounter.

The Hebrew language carries so much depth and poeticism. The Hebrew word for desert is MIDBAR, it is written out at M-D-B-R because there are no vowels in Hebrew. There is a lot of context for translating and reading Hebrew. M-D-B-R is also used to spell another word MEDABER (MEDABEAR), which is translated as “to speak.” Many of our wilderness bible stories go like this: someone (like Moses) is sent to the wild or the desert, and upon entering the wild, God comes to speak.

We enter the midbar, the desert, so God can medaber speak to us. As we are drawn to the wilderness this season, may we fix our heart and eyes on the wild as a place to encounter God. The desert is not always a place to avoid, a place of death, despair, and hopelessness. The desert is a place where God comes to speak to us. It is a place where we encounter God the most. The wild can be a holy place. Yes, there are times where the desert is dry and the wilderness is overwhelming. Those times where we feel inadequate, where we hold self-doubt, where we are struggling and things seem pointless. In the midst of the thickness of the wild, God is still there speaking to us. Just as God told Moses, I will be with you, God calls out to us I am with you.

Beloveds, no matter the direness of the desert, God is with us always to the end of the age. Hear the call of the wild, it is a place to journey into not through. Embrace the desert and let it be a place you encounter God. Into the wild we go, stop and listen for God's word. Change your hearts and transform your minds, fix your eyes upon God, trust in the everlasting love of God to be with you now and always.

Amen.
