From the Desk of Pastor Keith

Friends of Jesus grow! They listen to Jesus, learn from Jesus, imitate Jesus, do what Jesus says and do what Jesus does. They don't sit still. Their relationship with Jesus grows. They get to know Jesus better and better. They learn to trust him more and more. Their love for him deepens and matures.

Friend of Jesus grow throughout their lives. Growth begins in baptism and continues until the day when life on this earth ends. They never stop growing.

We grow by spending time with Jesus. Especially important is time hearing God's Word and being fed in the Meal of Holy Communion. These are the tools the Holy Spirit uses to help us grow. Friends of Jesus make it a point to use these tools at every opportunity because they want to grow.

Sunday School for children and youth has begun. This is an important way they grow in their relationship with Jesus. Be sure to invite the children you know to come. Offer to give them a ride. Continue to encourage them throughout the year.

I pray that each of you will experience growth in your relationship with Jesus this fall. Whether you are young or old, new to the faith or quite mature, I pray that you will challenge yourself and take some new steps this fall to help you grow.

Yours in Christ,
Pastor Keith

Education and The Reformation

Martin Luther was a strong advocate of education. That's not surprising since he was a trained educator. But his encouragement and support of education went deeper than that. It grew out of his study of the Bible and his desire that everyone grow in their understanding of the Scriptures and in their relationship to Christ.

Luther was very involved in his own children's spiritual growth. In fact, his Small Catechism, which was published in 1529 and is still used in the church today, was compiled in part as a result of the religious instruction he led in his own home. "When I get up in the morning, I pray with the children the Ten Commandments, the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, and then some Psalm," he said in a sermon in 1530. Repetition of prayers and Scripture, he believed, made one strong in faith. That was true for him as well. He said, "Here one forever remains a learner. Though I am a great doctor, I haven't yet progressed beyond the instruction of children."

Luther was an advocate of education for all ages, women and men, girls and boys. Lutherans have continued this emphasis on education to this day. They believe that education in the content and practices of the Christian faith is essential. They have a long-standing focus on education of children and youth in the home and in the church. Adult learning happens in conversation, in worship, in service to others, and in a variety of formal and informal educational efforts.

Wherever Lutherans have gone in the world, they have established schools for children and youth, teaching religion and other subjects because they deem all aspects of God's world worthy of study. Around the globe, they support thousands of early childhood, primary, and secondary schools, as well as colleges and universities and seminaries.

Life together

Lutherans support public education. Many Lutherans serve as teachers and aids, school administrators, and board members at all levels of public education. In 2007 the ELCA adopted a social statement titled "Our Calling in Education." In this statement they committed themselves to work to ensure that all have access to high-quality education for the common good. For the sake of serving the world, Lutherans value education not only in the Christian faith, but also about the world we serve.

Worship and Children

Worship is a wonderful activity for people of all ages, including children. Even very young children respond to the music, the liturgy, and the actions of worship. While it is hard for young children to sit for an hour (it can even be hard for adults!), here are a few tips to help them worship:

- + Smile at a child and shake his or her hand during the sharing of the peace. Remember to smile and greet the parents as well. A smile goes a long way, a frown can discourage for life.
- + Sit where your children can see what is going on.
- + Encourage children to do all the actions - sitting, standing, shaking hands, making the sign of the cross, walking forward for a blessing during communion. As they get older, they can help with taking up the offering, lighting candles, and greeting people.
- + When children are able to read, point out the words and songs in the bulletin and hymnal. Encourage them to participate.

Children are capable of participating in much of the worship service. Whether you have a child or not, we can all help the littlest ones among us to participate in worship. May we all come to know the rich blessings of worshipping together!
